Canadian Highways International Corporation (CHIC) is a world-renowned transportation infrastructure development company specializing in public-private partnerships. It offers a fully integrated package of expertise in project finance, design, construction and operation. The company can apply all or any combination of these resources to the successful development of turnkey infrastructure projects around the world.

Founded in 1993, CHIC is composed of four leading Ontario-based project management, engineering and construction companies: AGRA Monenco Inc., Armbro Construction Ltd., BFC Construction Corporation, and Dufferin Construction Company, a division of St. Lawrence Cement Inc.

In 1994, the Ontario government selected CHIC as its private-sector partner to design, build, operate and maintain the $1-billion 407 Express Toll Route near Toronto.

In 1996, the company was selected to finance and develop the Cobequid Pass toll highway in Nova Scotia.

Canadian Highways has a worldwide mandate from its partners to pursue national and international transportation infrastructure opportunities.
